

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

By way of example, an embodiment of the present invention comprises an apparatus for use with a computer device. The apparatus includes a first portion configured to support a media device such that the media device is located on a first side of the first portion. The apparatus also includes a second portion located on a second side of the first portion and configured to at least partially secure the position of at least one computer component with respect to a connector coupled to the chassis.